About the Training:

This interactive and exploratory workshop will focus on a variety of seldom examined issues that emerge in play therapy relationships: play therapy as a process of living out beliefs about a child rather than applying techniques, methods or skills; the play therapist as a person of commitment and passion; expectancy versus expectations; intangibles that impact possibilities and progress in play therapy; understanding the sequence of inner emotional steps that precede behavioral change and returning responsibility to children. In this workshop, a way of Being with a child will be explored that touches the inner person of the child that is waiting to come forth and be experienced. This workshop will challenge you to look within and to examine your core beliefs about children and the therapeutic process. Workshop activities will include experiential learning about yourself, videos of Dr. Landreth's play therapy sessions, and the art expressions of a child who was dying.

Objectives:

Following the workshop, participants should be able to:

- 1) construct a model of how play facilitates the process of self discovery;
- 2) describe how the person of the play therapist is a therapeutic variable;
- 3) explain how play therapy is a process rather than an event;
- 4) identify four healing messages needed by children;
- 5) identify dimensions of the play therapy relationship that are therapeutic;
- 6) describe how to empower a child by returning responsibility to the child; and
- 7) identify intangible dimensions that impact the play therapy relationship.
