Sand therapy integrated with play therapy--theory and integration

This workshop will introduce basic skills for setting up sand therapy within a play therapy practice. All participants will get a chance to have experiential learning building trays, and inviting/observing others. An emphasis will be placed on "reading" sand trays, using amplification language, and understanding symbol communication (both with self and other). In addition, Dr. Gil will discuss how to weave sand therapy themes with play therapy and how to use both expressive therapies to inform and advance treatment goals. Group and family sand trays will be explored along with integrated approaches that are both directive and nondirective.

An Evening with Eliana Gil

Join us for 2 hours at this completely unscripted Question and Answer Session with internationally renowned expert on Play Therapy and Trauma--Dr. Eliana Gil! Bring your questions and enthusiasm to learn and play!

Using Play in Attachment-Focused Family Therapy

This attachment-based workshop will prepare play therapists and other mental health professionals to understand how (and why) to use an integrated approach when working with family systems who lack a strong relational foundation. The presenter will highlight diverse play therapy approaches that prepare mental health professionals to offer responsible expressive activities designed either for assessment or treatment. Dr. Gil will encourage participants to think about ways that play therapy and other expressive approaches, such as drama, art, symbol work, puppet play, and other techniques can overcome client hesitancy and promote specific attachment-based goals. Participants will engage in experiential work to gain first-hand knowledge of the depth and impact of expressive work integrated with play therapy.
